Description

End panels

A kitchen end panel is a panel that is fixed to the end of a run of kitchen cabinets that finishes the look of the kitchen properly.

An end panel is fitted to any exposed side of the kitchen units. The primary use of a kitchen end panel is to finish the exposed units, so they match the rest of the kitchen, it is used to match up the end with the kitchen doors. The end panel is normally finished with the same colour and style as the kitchen doors, they are often made from the same material as the kitchen doors or worktops. You fit an end panel to any exposed kitchen cabinet. This normally means fitting them to the end of any exposed wall units, base units and tall units, such as larder units and appliance housing. You would usually also use it to finish exposed units between the tall units and base units.

Two ways of cut and install the end panel. You can choose between 2 positions for the end panel when aligning with the doors:

1. Add a slight edge so that the end panel sits flush with the worktops, which sit protruding further out than the kitchen cabinets.

2. - The end panels to fit flush with the doors
